It is exactly what it says, its a display of a virtual orrery. Its reasonably priced. Only criticism is it needs to be updated for the latest update to the oculus, it dosent seem to be working with the recent update.. This isn't like one of those outdated geocentric orrery simulators. These developers took the risk of heresy to make a heliocentric simulator. It actually has the sun in the center of the solar system! Now that we have Celestrion, Copernicus' work will not be in vain. On a more serious note, the game itself is pretty bare-bones in presentation but nevertheless reasonably priced. Advantages: -Pretty cool looking graphics overall; the background is rough though. -It's accessible, cheap, and exactly what it says on the tin. -Basic but fitting music and sound. It actually has a good ambiance to it. Disadvantages: -May face religious prosecution from inquisitors. -Would not recommend sunscreen while on Venus. -It's a neat widget but doesn't have the most replayability. I feel like it could be a lot more interactive than it currently is. Suggestion: -Make the rotations of the planets affected by time, not just their revolutions. Conclusion: It's cheap, basic, but nevertheless enjoyable simulator. It could do with a little polishing though. Would orbit again.. An ineteresting game but needs work. Please add escape key to exit program. thank you.
